OUT OF MONEY AGAIN

CITY GENERAL FUND EXHAUSTED —EMPLOYEES MUST WAIT

A DOG TAX IS ORDERED

Council Adds Another Revenue Producer at Meeting Last Night—J. A. Wray Appointed City Clerk

With city finances in bad shape, the general fund being exhausted, city employees, with the exception of two policemen, a fire driver and the cemetery sexton, will be forced to wait for their pay envelopes. At the meeting of the council last night, because of lack of funds, no bills or salaries were paid from the general fund except those mentioned. "Things are in a mighty bad way," said Mayor Garrett, in discussing the matte rthis morning. "It will be six months," said he, "before the city tax money comes in, and when it does it will have been all spent. It is up to the people to do their part and to pay promptly such taxes as poll tax, vehicle tax and other assessments made. Vehicle owners are responding readily to the tax and receipts have been more than was expected."

As another revenue producer, a dog tax was introduced at the meeting last night and was promptly passed, the ordinance calling for a fee of $2 from each dog owner in the city for each animal kept. The council named Cooper Gooden as enumerator of doss and collector of the tax. It is expected that a considerable revenue will be returned to the city from the dog tax, it being estimated that at least 500 canines claim Maryville as their legal residence.

The permanent appointment of J. Arthur Wray as city clerk was confirmed by the council. Mr. Wray was named temporarily to take the place of Emery Airy, who resigned shortly after his appointment. Street Commissioner Crockett was re-appointed for another thirty day term, the permanency of the place depending on the amount of money in the street fund.

Ordinances were passed requiring that sidewalks be built abutting the property at the corner of West Fourth and Buchanan streets where the Standard Oil Co. is erecting a filling station, and in front of the Hartley building on North Main street occupied by Diss' garage.

Building permits were issued to the Independent Oil Co. for a filling station to be erected at the corner of North Main and Fifth streets, to the Dooley sisters for the erection of a building on North Main adjoining the Michau building, and also to O. L. Holmes for buildings on the lots adjoining. Mr. Holmes secured the permit in anticipation of letting the contract before the council meets again, thereby avoiding delay.

Personnel of the Delegation of Bankers, Business Men and Farmers, Who Come to Inspect Live Stock

On Saturday, June 22, Maryville will be host to one of the largest delegations of visitors that has ever come on a similar mission. Headed by Governor Charles H. Brough of Arkansas, nearly one hundred bankers, business men and stockmen from Arkansas and Tennessee will spend an entire day here seeing and learning more about Nodaway county herds of fine Shorthorns and dairy cattle and Poland-China hogs. They come from Arkansas, Tennessee and other Southern states. The bankers and business men in the party are interested in lending money to the farmers for the purchase of live stock and the trip is made through the northern section of Missouri to give them further encouragement in lending money on live stock business. The farmers in the party are all prosperous and leaders in their respective communities and are making the trip for the value it will be to them and to their communities.

Leading local stockmen and breeders are making plans to entertain the visitors while here and to show them some of the fine herds in this vicinity. It is presumed that automobile parties will be organized that the visitors may be more readily shown a large number of farms and herds.

In charge of the party will be J. H. McLeod of Little Rock, agent in animal

FIERY BAG SURPRISED ELMO

New Army Propaganda—Distributing Balloon Landing There Was Returned to Fort Omaha

An army balloon of a new type to be used in distributing propaganda landed night before last at Elmo and was taken back to the balloon station at Fort Omaha, at which point it was started on a trial trip.

The balloon is equipped with a clock device to distribute circulars. It is made of a glistening fabric which reflects light in such a way as to appear on fire. The first balloon was sent away from Omaha Thursday night. It distributed Red Cross literature all the way to near Elmo, where it was found on a fence by William Fox, a Wabash conductor. When the train reached Elmo, Conductor Fox had it held while, with the train crew, he went back for the balloon.

The clock was still running. Fox took the balloon to Fort Omaha. Thousands of people who saw the balloon on its flight believed it was a "runaway" on fire.

Officers at Fort Omaha announce more tests will be made and the balloons sent to do the work of "peddling the truth" to Germans.

WILFLEY AT WORK

NEW MISSOURI SENATOR TAKES HOLD LIKE A VETERAN

MCADOO--RESULT GETTER

Cabinet Secretary and Rail Director Solves Revenue Problems Quickly—Railroad Earnings Assured

(By W. C. Van Cleve)

Washington, June 4, 1918.

The Junior Senator from Missouri, Hon. Xenophon P. Wilfley, who succeeded the late Senator Stone, has been taking hold like a veteran. Senator Wilfley has but a short time in which to take the measure of his job and make a campaign for the nomination in August. He is badly handicapped in the matter of his campaign because of his rather slight acquaintance with the voters of Missouri and his unfamiliarity with state politics.

Mr. Wilfley has confined himself chiefly to the practice of law in St. Louis and, as a lawyer, has made good, being a member of one of the leading firms of that city. Prior to his appointment to the Senate he had no idea of entering the race for senatorial honors. He is country bred, a native Missourian, and comes with a clean record, with legal ability, with common sense, with a hearty handshake and with a pleasant smile, and has created a most favorable impression among his associates in the Senate and with members of the Missouri delegation.

He is an orator of genuine merit and as a public speaker takes rank with the best. The precedents of the Senate will hardly permit him to turn himself loose for some time to come and the fact that Congress will be in session throughout the summer will prevent him from getting before the people personally as he would like. He will have to rely largely upon the efforts of his friends.

He has appointed "Josh" Barbee of Marshall, one of the leading lawyers of Saline county, his secretary. Mr. Barbee enjoys a wide and favorable acquaintance and will render valuable assistance to the Senator.

With William Howard Taft and Theodore Roosevelt shaking hands and Charles E. Hughes investigating for Woodrow Wilson, it may be said that the co-ordination of American forces is fairly complete.

In the matter of tax bills, Secretary McAdoo has solved the problem of the maximum of results within a minimum of time. When it comes to raising money quickly he can run things around Congress and all the other revenue raising bodies. At one stroke of the pen he has levied a tax of more than $800,000,000 by increasing the passenger and freight rates on railroads. Through recent legislation, Congress and the Interstate Commerce Commission are relegated to the rear.

According to the official order, the increase is made "in order to defray the expenses of Federal control and operation fairly chargeable to railway operating expenses, and also to pay tax accruals other than war taxes, net rents for joint facilities and equipment, and compensation to the carriers operating as a unit." It is a sweeping order and goes far beyond anything the roads themselves would have dared to ask. Along with the increase of passenger rates to three cents and a 25 per cent increase in freight rates, will come the practical abolition of mileage, excursion rates and interstate rates

The move was made necessary in order to escape a huge and embarassing deficit in the Treasury. The Government has agreed to guarantee the operating expenses, upkeep and net returns to the railroads taken over. The increase will be largely absorbed in increased expenditures for coal, and wage increases. Fuel will take about $160,000,000 and the increase allowed by the Director of Railroads to employees will call for about $350,000,000.

It is expected by this move that the financial situation as to the railroads has been solved for the period of the war and that they will hereafter be able to show a reasonable balance on the right side of the ledger.

Most of the Missouri members of Congress will be without opposition

PERSHING LED AT CANTIGNY

MISSOURIAN IN PERSONAL COMMAND OF TROOPS AT BATTLE ON MARNE

AMERICANS DRIVE ON

EXTEND LINES TO DEPTH OF 2½ MILES OVER A SIX-MILE FRONT NORTHWEST OF CHATEAU THIERRY

MARINES IN ANOTHER SMASH

In Gruelling Fighting That Lasted for Nine Hours They Captured Several Villages and Many Prisoners—French Airmen Aid

Washington, June 8.—General Pershing personally commanded the recent American advance on the enemy at the Marne which resulted in the capture of Cantigny with heavy German loss. This information was given to the senate military committee this afternoon at the weekly conference with the war council. Today the council regards the situation on the western front as materially improved, not only the German advance having been halted, but counter attacks have netted the Allies substantial gains.

With the American Army on the Marne, June 8.—The American marines, standing with the French between the German armies and Paris, extended their gains of Thursday and advanced to a depth of about two and one-half miles over a front of six miles northwest of Chateau Thierry, capturing several villages and three hundred prisoners. Not one of the marines was taken prisoner.

At the railway station on the right wing of the line was the scene of the most grueling fighting. There men fell fast, the enemy's loss being very great. At no time on any other front has the enemy succeeded in massing such a formidable array of machine guns. Fighting during the two assaults continued uninterrupted for nine hours.

Paris, June 8.—French aviators cooperated with the American marines in Thursday's attacks northwest of Chateau Thierry and flying low and marking the advance of the Americans they wirelessed to the gunners where to put the shells in order to do the most damage. The gunners quickly took the cue and soon had a merciless fire in the enemy's ranks, doing great damage.

London, June 8.—We captured a few prisoners in a raid in the sector at Hulloch, the war office announced today, while patrols inflicted casualties on the enemy and captured machine guns near Strazeele. There has been artillery activity north of Albert and southeast of Arras.

Paris, June 8.—Fresh progress has been made by the French on the Marne front south of the Ourcq river, the war office announces today. Two violent German counter attacks were launched in the district northwest of Bourresches and both were beaten off, the Germans suffering heavy losses. One hundred and fifty prisoners were taken.

REPUBLICANS UP IN ARMS

They Are Opposed to the Administration's New Revenue Program as Laid Down by Sec'y McAdoo

Washington, June 8. — Republican senators are up in arms over the administration's new revenue program laid down by Secretary McAdoo, calling for a taj levy of eight billions on the people next year. The administration plan would double the revenue from all sources. The republicans take the position that the new bill should not provide more than two billions additional taxes instead of four billions as planned.

MEMBERS OF COUNTY ASS'N DISCUSS WAR PROBLEMS

MORE WILL VOLUNTEER

Assurance That Nodaway County's Quota Will Be Filled Is Given the Committee In Charge

Few meetings are held these days by fraternal or commercial bodies that are not patriotic in their nature with the war and its problems the chief topic for discussion. Vitally interested are the physicians and at the meeting last night in the offices of Dr. F. M. Ryan of members of the Nodaway County Medical Association enlistment of additional physicians for service were idscussed at length following a business meeting of the association.

A number of doctors from various parts who have not as yet volunteered were present, giving assurance that they were ready and willing to go. The problem of enlistment for service it was pointed out, from the viewpoint of the medical men presents many difficulties, chief among them is giving up a practice where lives are already at stake and where their removal from the communities in which they live would work a real hardship on their patients and the public. A number not yet enlisted expressed themselves at last night's meeting as having arranged their affairs, realizing that the time was at hand when they might no longer delay their services to their country, and assurance was given the committee cooperating with the state and national defense society, that Nodaway county's quota would be filled.

A discussion of professional problems and matters pertaining to the public health were included in the meeting, which was well attended.

SUB MENACE GROWS

STEAMER VINLAND BOCHED WEDNESDAY 65 MILES OUT

A TRANSPORT CHASED

Undersea Boat Has Kept Well Out of Way of Destroyers and Continues to Evade Capture

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 8.—Arriving at an Atlantic port last night the Clyde liner Arapahoe reported a German submarine had been sighted off the coast of Floria. Several coastwise steamers then at sea made at once for the nearest port. The steamer Heisman, arriving later, reported sighting the raider.

Biddeford, Me., June 8.—It it reported here that a U boat has been sighted seven miles off Biddeford Pool, a summer resort. Lightship 74 is reported to have sent out the report.

Washington, June 8.—Despite the various reassuring statements that the submarine menace is under control, U-boats operating off the Atlantic coast cause a very serious menace to navigation, having kept well out of the reach of the destroyers. Although shots have been exchanged not one has been sunk. Reports that submarines actually chased an incoming transport for half a day until the vessel was rescued by destroyers has been received and is generally accepted as true by the navy department, the detailed information of the affair being withheld.

Washington, June 8.—Sinking of the Norwegian steamer Vinland by a German submarine 65 miles off the Virginia Capes at 6 p. m. Wednesday was announced last night by the navy department. The crew was rescued and landed yesterday at Cape May, N. J.

The Vinland was sent down nine hours after the British steamer Harpathian was torpedoed thirty-five miles farther from the Virginia coast. Until word of her sinking came from Cape May today nothing had been heard of the operations of the enemy raiders since the landing of the Harpathian's crew.

Washington, June 8.—The possibility that German submarines are lurking off the Atlantic coast hereafter must be regarded as a continuing factor in American war measures, in the opinion of many naval officials.

Besides vigilant guard at home, unremitting efforts against the submarines at the points of egress is the antidote favored here. A carefully planned campaign is known to have been approved long ago and probably now is well under way.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Clark of Skidmore, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Day, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hart of Parnell, Mr. and Mrs. V. O. Hunt of Ravenwood were in Maryville on business today.

ENGLAND ONE BIG PARK

Back Yards Are Prettier Than Our Flower Gardens, Nodaway Boy Writes

The following letter has been received by Mr. and Mrs. John White from their son, Wilfred White, who is now in Europe:

"Somewhere in France.
"May 13, 1918.

"My Dear Folks: Landed safe and sound, had a fine voyage all the way. The sea was a little rough for about four days, but was not bad.

"I was sure glad to set my feet on land once more, and when I have crossed again, coming back, I will have enough sea to last me the rest of my days.

"This is the prettiest country I ever saw in my life. It is one big park. You have seen pictures of England, but they do not do justice to what I have seen. The back yards are prettier than our flower gardens at home. The house looks so queer, so oddly shaped, so much fancy work on them. I counted the chimneys of one house—just sixteen of them.

"The farms here are small. If one man has ten acres he has a big farm; but believe me, there are no vacant fence corners; something on every inch.

"We sure have a pretty camp here. Grass all through and big shade trees.

"How is everybody at home? It has been raining here all day, but the mud doesn't bother. I took a walk yesterday, and such scenery! The people here believe in lots of shade and foliage. You will go right by a home and never see it for the foliage. The roads are fine; haven't seen a dirt road since I landed.

"Will you find out what Emmett Sturm's address is? I have lost it. Is Walter Scott still at home?

"Well, I had better close. Answer soon.

"PVT. H. WILFRED WHITE."

SUN GAZERS READY

SCIENTISTS AND SUPERSTITIOUS AWAIT SUN ECLIPSE TODAY

CROWDS GO TO OREGON

On the Northwestern Coast Is Presented the Best Opportunity to View the Total Eclipse

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Denver, Col., June 8.—Astronomers throughout the country are prepared for the work of observing the total eclipse of the sun, which will occur late this afternoon. It will be visible in its totality along a sixty-mile strip extending across the United States from the southwestern corner of the state of Washington on the Pacific Coast, to Florida, on the Atlantic.

Astronomers consider themselves unusually fortunate in their opportunity for observing this eclipse, one of seven visible in the United States during the present century, in that the centre line of this sixty-mile strip passes within four miles of the observatory at Denver University, where photographs of the corona of the sun will be taken with the aid of the great telescope which is equipped with a twenty-inch lens.

Oregonians are Eager.

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Baker, Ore., June 8.—Government scientists and hundreds of amateur astronomers and sun gazers were on the qui vive here today for the total eclipse of the sun, which is scheduled for late this afternoon. Baker, on account of its dry atmosphere, has been selected by naval observatory heads for an observation point and for the past month astronomers and scientists have been setting up apparatus and rehearsing the work they will do today. As the totality of the eclipse here lasts but one minute and forty-eight seconds, every member of the Government party has to be letter perfect in his task, so that full advantage of the brief interval may be taken.

Negroes Superstitious.

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Jackson, Miss., June 8.—Ghosts walked, goblins swished through the air, dragons emerged from the swamps and many a dusky face quivered with fear uncontrollable late today when the South was buried in darkness as a result of a total eclipse of the sun. Despite the warning that had been given, negroes could not be convinced but that some great disaster was upon them, and not a few of the more superstitious ones declared the world was coming to an end and that the good would be separated from the bad—that the devil would claim his subjects and the children of the Lord be advanced into eternal paradise.

Crowds Invade Centralia.

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Centralia, Wash., June 8.—Centralia and Chehalis today are hosts to thousands of people who have come here from southwestern Washington and Portland, by train and in autos, to view the total eclipse of the sun. In both cities (which are only a mile apart) the commercial clubs have made special arrangements to care for visitors and to exhibit the advantages of the city while spectators are waiting for the sun and moon to perform.

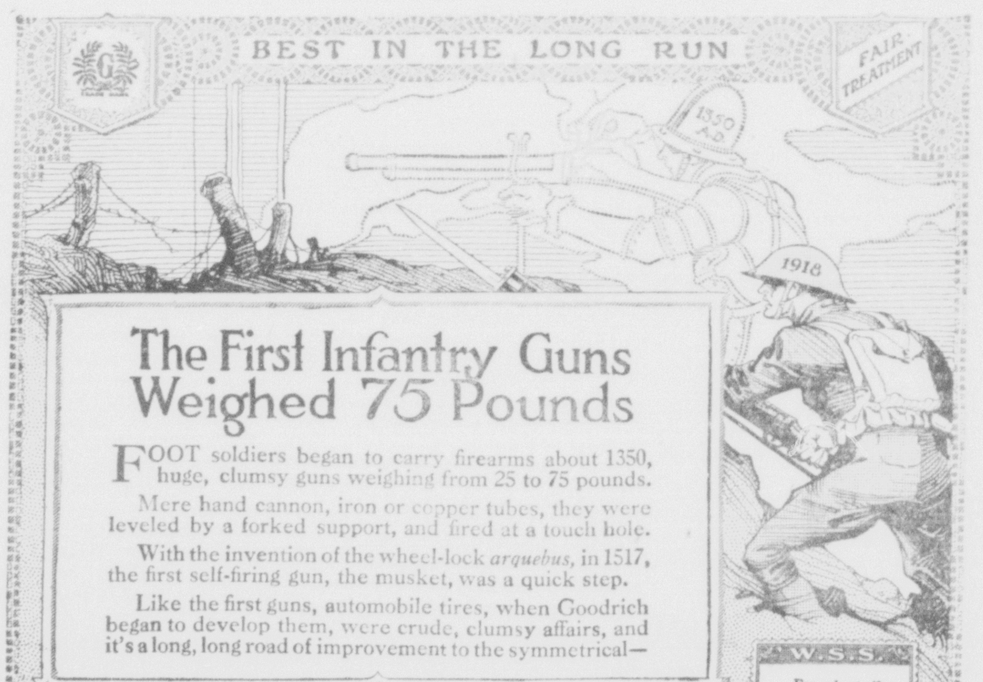
CRADDICK SERVICE

BEST IN THE LONG RUN



The First Infantry Guns Weighed 75 Pounds

FOOT soldiers began to carry firearms about 1350, huge, clumsy guns weighing from 25 to 75 pounds.

Mere hand cannon, iron or copper tubes, they were leveled by a forked support, and fired at a touch hole.

With the invention of the wheel-lock arquebus, in 1517, the first self-firing gun, the musket, was a quick step.

Like the first guns, automobile tires, when Goodrich began to develop them, were crude, clumsy affairs, and it's a long, long road of improvement to the symmetrical—

The Human Side of Uncle Sam's American Army

Told By a United States Army Chaplain Who Considers His Job The Most Interesting of Them All.

I consider my job the most interesting in the army. No officer has more rich or varied opportunities for service than a chaplain. No officer's calendar presents greater contrasts. It is a chaplain's duty to oversee the dispositions of his mobile flock as well as their souls, minds, amusements, morals, correspondence and reading matter. He must go from the boxing ring to the hospital, and from the theatre to the guard house. He is in jail oftener than any other man in the service. But if his work is well done, he is there none too often to suit the men.

Last January General Pershing sent a cablegram to the secretary of war asking that the number of chaplains in the army be increased for the war to an average of three per regiment. His cablegram reads, in part, as follows: "* * * I believe the personnel of the army has never been equalled and the conduct has been excellent, but to overcome entirely the conditions found here requires fortitude borne of great courage and lofty spiritual ideas. Counting myself responsible for the welfare of our men in every respect it is my desire to surround them with the best influence possible. In the fulfillment of this solemn trust it seems wise to request the aid of the churches from home. * * * *"

The chaplain is a commissioned officer, starting with the rank of first lieutenant. He is always an ordained clergyman who has had practical experience as a pastor before entering the army. The different religious bodies are represented in the chaplaincies in numbers proportionate to the number of adherents of the different denominations in the country at large. Each is privileged to conduct religious services in the manner prescribed by his own church. But, when that has been said, I have expressed all the denominationalism that there is in the army. In this as in many other respects the army has set an example to civil life, for it has learned the needlessness and waste of many sectarian lines in the face of human need.

Chaplain an Information Bureau.

Some people have the idea that all a chaplain has to do is conduct religious services. At other times they think of him as enjoying a life of complete relaxation. The utter mistakenness of this notion becomes evident after the briefest surveyal of the tasks assigned to a chaplain.

For one thing, he is the information bureau of the regiment. If a soldier wants to know a street address, a telephone number or a train schedule, he goes to the chaplain's office. If he wants right information on current topics he calls on the chaplain and asks him if he has any late magazines or newspapers dealing with the question. On some of the battleships some of the chaplains put out periodicals for the men. Some of these magazines are really excellent productions.

Then, there is the whole problem of education. If there are men in the regiment lacking in necessary education the chaplain is expected to organize classes in the common branches, so that they may improve themselves along these lines, make themselves more useful to their country and brighten their futures. The chaplain frequently gives lectures to recruits on discipline and the relation of moral cleanliness to health and efficiency. He keeps a record of all the men as they come into the service, including their names, home address, next of kin, education and other items.

The chaplain's day includes plenty of humorous incidents. A fellow chaplain, now on duty at one of the base hospital, tells an amusing story of talking to an Italian who had been recently injured. The man listened attentively, his great brown eyes fixed on the chaplain's face. The padre did not know that the injured man was an Italian and spoke little English, though a soldier in the United States army. After suggesting a little prayer the chaplain added carelessly:

Religion In His Foot.

"It makes no great difference between us, but . . . . . what is your creed?"

The injured man still looked earnestly upward and the chaplain repeated his question. The soldier caught only the questioning intonation and flashed a brilliant smile.

"Oh, eet ees in my foot," he said, in an explanatory tone, and immediately pulled back the covers of the bed, displaying a much bandaged limb.

The chaplain must be a good mixer. This is especially necessary because he is much concerned with the recreational life of the men. He must be capable of participating actively in manly sports and of organizing such games as will appeal to the tastes of the men. The social life of the regiment is one of his responsibilities. The movies, the boxing matches, the volley-ball games and the wrestling bouts are all within his province. He writes letters, too, for men who are sick or wounded. In case of difficulty or death it is the chaplain who must impart the message to the loved ones who gave the man into service.

Because he has access to every one, the chaplain becomes involved in many delicate problems of conduct. I once received a rather pathetic note from the mother of one of the men asking whether her boy was still at the post. I happened to know that he was in the guard house. I went to see the boy and asked him why he had not written home. The whole story came out immediately. During the Christmas furlough the soldier had married a girl whom his mother did not approve of and, in a fit of temper, his mother had said she wished never to see or hear from him again. Before the conversation was over the chaplain had persuaded the boy to write. Thus the difficulty was smoothed over and a difficulty smoothed over is a chaplain's duty done.

Go Over the Top.

So far I have said nothing of the work of the chaplains in the field, which, for this present war, means chiefly "over there." My own experience has not extended thither, but I can answer briefly some of the questions that people ask. The query is often put to me: "Do chaplains go into the front line trenches?" The answer is yes, of course. Frequently they go over the top with the men. A chaplain's place is wherever his men are, and when they are in danger he is, too. A chaplain who is not willing if necessary to lose his life in the performance of his duties is false to his trust and does not deserve his commission. As a matter of fact, many have been killed. The mortality among chaplains on the western front has been as high as one a day, which is a high percentage when the small total number of chaplains is considered.

The chaplain has this additional test of nerve that he is obliged to go unarmed. By the terms of the Geneva convention chaplains are not permitted to carry arms. Of course, in return for this, the person of the chaplain is supposed to be sacrosanct. But everyone knows that, to the Hun, the safeguards of the Geneva convention are as obsolete as the Sermon on the Mount is to them.

A Brother to the Wounded.

The hospital is one of the principal fields for the chaplain's endeavors. As one chaplain puts it: "In the hospitals they can't get away from me." But there is a more powerful element in the chaplain's success among the sick boys. As soon as they feel helpless they reach out involuntarily for a friendly hand and it is rare for a man in a hospital not to be glad to see the chaplain.

The most impressive story I have heard was given to me by a friend of mine who is a chaplain. He had become greatly interested in one of the men who was seriously ill and not expected to live. Every time the chaplain came to see him the fellow would ask him to "say just one little prayer, won't you?" Toward the end they thought that he would be delirious. But he was not. The chaplain came and the soldier whispered his customary request for a prayer. The chaplain prayed. When he had finished, he asked:

"Did you understand me then, Gray?"

"Yes," the dying man whispered. "I understood. I can understand anything about God. It's wonderful."

Those were his last words.

The army has learned that men may worship God in different ways, but they all need the same kind of brothering. So the army chaplain looks after all his boys alike, whether they have faith or whether they have none. He knows, better than any other officer, that Uncle Sam's boys are not mechanisms, but men. Because he comes so closely in touch with the human of the army he is in a position to stimulate the morale without which fighting men are powerless to win battles.

WILL YOU HELP IN HARVEST?

Commercial Organizations Urged to Aid In Getting Vacationists to Go Into the Fields This Summer

Washington, June 8.—Organizations that so successfully conducted the third Liberty Loan and second Red Cross campaigns are now working in cooperation with farm help specialists of the United States department of agriculture in many cities to find workers with farm experience to help farmers harvest the wheat crop. Other organizations in cities, towns and villages are also uniting their efforts to aid in this work. If the wheat is to saved and other needed farm work done there must be closer cooperation between the town and country, according to the department of agriculture. Non-essential industries must permit their employees, who have had farm experience, to go to the country and help during the harvest season.

Commercial organizations should secure pledges from men who are willing to devote a few days or weeks of their vacation in the harvest fields and should see that these men are placed when and where they are most needed, suggest officials of the department of agriculture. City Y. M. C. As., athletic clubs and country clubs should open their doors to these men and give them an opportunity to take physical exercise that will prepare them for labor in the fields. And women's organizations should volunteer to go to the country and help prepare meals for the army of harvest laborers and in other ways lighten the tasks of their rural cousins.

"KEEP EXPERIENCED MEN AT WORK"

That Is What That Standard of Democracy, the Platte County Landmark, Says

Under the quoted caption above the Platte County Landmark, one of the strongest Democratic newspapers in Platte county, and one of the most influential, comes out squarely and flat-footed in its issue of last week, for the return of Charles F. Booher, the present painstaking and efficient member of congress in this district to his present position—where he is, as are all other experienced and loyal men now more needed than at any time in the past.

The Landmark also is not at all backward in giving reasons that Mr. Booher should be kept where he is, as do all fair-minded and patriotic newspapers appreciate the fact that at the present and for the coming period until the war shall close, men of experience and ripened judgment are needed—and must be had. Not only does the Landmark, but so do the patriotically inclined of those who would step into the shoes of present incumbents; for every day come reports where good and patriotic candidates are stepping aside and out of the contest to take the seats away from the men who are in Washington, attending to the duties for which their ecountry called them there, and remaining patriotically at their posts unheeding their personal affairs. It is these patriotic congressmen for whom candidates to succeed them are acting from patriotic motives when they step aside and wait for some other opportunity. This is as it should be.

The Landmark lays especial stress on the facts that Mr. Booher has never shirked his duty, no matter how hard hunters at his home worked to supplant him while he was on duty; his especial fitness, his patriotic and consistent loyalty and his fidelity to the administration and his duty.

ENLIST WITHOUT RELEASE

Men Registering June 5 May Volunteer For Navy Without a Certificate From Local Draft Board

Men registering on June 5, 1918, may voluntarily enlist in the navy without a certificate of release from their local boards. Of course, after the men have been assigned order and class numbers they will be required to obtain their release before voluntary enlistment.

Enlistments in the Radio service have been discontinued, temporarily, until further notice; also enlistments in the Hospital Corps have been stopped for the time being due to the crowded condition at the various schools where men of these ratings are trained.

All other ratings are open, however, and there are attractive ratings open to unskilled men as well as men who have received training in some trade.

Age for enlistment is still 18 to 35 years.

Will Take Mr. Wilfley's Place.

A. W. Hoover has been selected by George L. Wilfley county chairman of the war savings stamp committee to have charge of the campaign for the sale of these stamps during the absence of Mr. Wilfley on a business trip to the West.

MONKEYS ACTUALLY AT WORK

Ingenious English Officer Devised Scheme by Which They Earn Their Daily Bread.

Monkeys actually are made to work in Malabar, India, which is perhaps the only place in the world where they earn their salt. The Malabar monkey is of the fine species known as the langur. It is very warm at Malabar, and there is a fan called the punka, which used to be kept in motion by a slave.

It required a slave to work each punka, but now every punka in Malabar is worked by a monkey. It was an English officer who conceived the idea of making the langur work in that manner. The fan is a movable frame covered with canvas and suspended from the ceiling. The motion is caused by pulling a cord. The officer tied the hands of a langur to one of the cords, and then by means of another cord put the machine in motion.

Of course, the monkey's hand went up and down, and the animal wondered what sort of a game was being played. Then the officer patted its head and fed it with candy till soon the langur thought it fine fun to work the punka. The experiment was successful, and now thousands of monkeys are in harness.

Who Built It?

Summing up his interpretation of the Amiens cathedral, the "Bible of Amiens," Ruskin asks:

"Who built it, shall we ask? God and man is the first true answer. The stars in their courses built it, and the nations. Greek Athens labors here, and the Roman Father Jove and Guardian Mars. The Gaul labors here and the Frank; kingly Norman, mighty Ostrogoth and wasted anchorite of Idumea. The actual man who built it scarcely cared to tell you he did so; nor do the historians brag of him. Any quantity of heraldries of knaves and faineants you may find in what they call their history; but this is probably the first time you ever read the name of Robert of Luzarches. I say he 'scarcely cared;' we are not sure that he cared at all. He signed his name nowhere, that I can hear of. You may perhaps find some recent initials cut by English remarkable visitors desirous of immortality, here and there about the edifice, but Robert the builder, or at least the master of that building cut his on no stone of it."

Give "Overt" a Chance.

Many a fine adjective has been spoiled by being hooked up in some facile phrase to a commonplace noun. For example, overt. Never in my life, writes H. L. Mencken in the New York Sun, have I encountered overt save in front of act. Thus joined and poisoned, it is mouthed abominably by lawyers and newspaper editorial writers; the literate fauna of a superior type avoid it almost altogether. And yet it is a fine adjective, a juicy adjective, an adjective worth knowing better. Why not overt honesty, overt destiny, overt love? I once had an overt black eye. Earlier in this life I made overt eyes at a girl overtly red-haired, and remember her oleaginous kiss every time the barber's brush slides across my face. Let us appoint a committee to get overt out of jail.

A Useful Husband.

"Why in the world does his wife call him Picket Fence?"

"Well, she says he's easy to see through."

"And, then, he's very useful around the house."

Another Matter.

"How do you propose to support my daughter, young man?"

"But I'm only proposing to marry her, sir."

POWERS REQUIRED BY WAR

Quality of Self-Reliance the First Requisite of the Really Great Commander.

War is wont to be associated with the physical rather than the intellectual or moral qualities, says Col. Theo. A. Dodge in the Forum. The idea of youth and strength and ardor is coupled with the military profession. Alexander at the Granicus, Scipio at Zama, Napoleon in '06, McClellan in '62, represent to the popular fancy the typical soldier. But war, from the standpoint of the captain, is primarily an intellectual process. The successful conduct of a campaign requires, first, exceptional mental powers; next, moral qualities of a high order; and last, a physique to withstand the drain of unremitting mental and nervous tension. The gladiatorial courage which prompted the little Roman legionary to close in upon the burly Teuton with the sword, or the prize-fighting pluck which carried the guards through the day at Waterloo, are not as essential to the captain as the moral force which on the broad strategic field helps him to push his own scheme home despite the threatening maneuvers of his opponent, which on the narrower field of battle enables him to risk the lives of thousands of his men upon the result of a calculation, or to watch with equipoise the compromising movements of his adversary, or to hold back his battalions for the supreme moment, are not as essential as that self-reliance which prompts him to great undertakings and sustains him through their performance.

FIRE ENGINES OF ALL SORTS

First Were Primitive Indeed Compared With the Splendid Ones in Use Today.

The first fire engine seen in America was received at Boston in 1659. It was made in England, and was of the type called "hand squirts." The instrument required the labor of three men, one on each side to hold the machine steady and to direct the nozzle, while the third man worked the plunger.

This contrivance was not much of an improvement over the "siphons used in conflagrations," described by Hero of Alexandria in his work on pneumatics, written about 150 B. C. At the close of the seventeenth century a slight advance was made in Newham's improved engine, patented in England, which consisted of a strong cistern of oak, mounted on wheels, and a suction pipe of leather.

Steam fire engines had their beginning in England in 1830, when Braithwaite built an engine of six horsepower, weighing 5,000 pounds. Though its performances were highly spoken of, this attempt to apply steam to fire engines cannot be said to have been successful, owing to its great weight. A. B. Latta of Cincinnati built an engine that was a vast improvement over its predecessors, and it was in the Ohio city, in 1853, that the steam fire engine first definitely supplanted the old style of fire-fighting apparatus.

Statues of Great Men.

The fashion of placing statues of popular heroes in parks and squares has prevailed for a long time, and is apparently not losing any of the popular favor, says the Ave Maria. It would not be so prevalent, however, if Rossini's plan were carried out.

The great Italian composer was waited on one day by a delegation who informed him that a statue of himself was to be erected in white marble, and that it would adorn the public square of his natal city. The artist inquired how much the statue would cost.

"Twelve thousand francs," was the reply.

"Well," said Rossini, "give me that sum, and on state occasions I'll go and stand on the pedestal myself, so that instead of a mere copy you'll have the original."

Commercial Morals Low in Japan.

China, for long centuries a highly developed nation, has an elaborate code of commercial ethics. Japan, on the other hand, which is a nation comparatively new to civilization, is not so scrupulous, says a writer in System. He continues:

"In Japan they say a contract is never a settled thing, whereas in China it is absolutely binding. The Japanese admit they have no traditions in trade, and the average Japanese merchant is firmly convinced that if he orders goods today, and the market declines before they arrive, he does perfectly right to refuse them. Banks in Japan recognize this trait in Japanese character. There is no such thing as lending money to a man on his personal note."

Power of the Old Song.

Consider the old song. Immediately all the things that make up the present existence fade into dim obscurity and for a while, for the duration of the melody at least, we live in glory of the song and its association.

One thing has remained the same and that is the song. The years have made no change in the beauty or the meaning of that. In the face of the constant change and activities which mean man's existence and the world's progress, the song has remained the same.

With the keen insight of human nature, authors have been appreciative of the power of the haunting melody, and have made it the theme of their work.

FOODS WITH CORN AS BASIS

Some Really Excellent Dishes That Are Popular in Different Parts of the World.

Maize was the chief aboriginal food of America and is still a favorite article of diet in Central America. "Samp" was adopted by the early colonists of New England from the Indians; it consisted, according to Roger Williams, of "Indian corn beaten and broiled and eaten hot or cold with milk or butter." "Hominy" was the name given to maize after it had been boiled with alkali, causing the skin of the grain to peel away and leave the soft inner portion.

"Succotash" originally meant an ear of maize, but was afterwards used to describe a mixture of corn and beans. "Hoe cake" was taken over from the southern Indians. The Pueblo Indians ate gruel boiled on stone stoves, calling it "paper bread." "Hulled corn or hominy, ground into a paste," says H. J. Spinden in his account of the Mexican dietary, "furnishes dough for the tortillas or unleavened cakes that take the place of bread in Mexico. Although the ordinary tortilla is rather soggy, it is delicious when made thin. For a breakfast dish nothing can surpass the enchilada, which is a tortilla rolled up cigar fashion with a little meat, cheese or chili pepper as a surprise in the center. This is toasted before the fire until it is crisp and crackling. Pinole is, properly speaking, a parched meal made from maize and other seeds. The word is applied to a variety of dishes such as stews of maize, meat and chili peppers."

HAVE MANY GOOD REMEDIES

Chinese Physicians by No Means All Ignorant of Fine Points of Their Profession.

Writing of a recent decree of the Chinese government, permitting autopsies on the human body, Milliard's Review (Shanghai) says that it is only lately that Chinese doctors discovered that the bodies of Orientals had the same internal arrangement as those of Occidentals. They had been taught that the organs were arranged much in the manner of a modern office building with the elevator shaft as the connecting medium. But it adds:

"It must be admitted, however, that the Chinese practitioners, through long experience and through the custom of handing down medical secrets from one generation to another, do have many excellent native remedies. One Chinese medical treatise indicates no less than 98 different types of pulse, and another form of treatment is that of puncturing the body with a needle. A chart of the human body contains 700 spots which are indicated as the places where it is safe to insert a needle without injuring a vital organ. Quinine as a medicine has long been known in China. Belief in the sanctity of the human body in relation to future life has up to the last few years prevented the use and development of surgery."

Play at Something.

Are you one of those who laugh at those who ride hobbies? Did you ever notice that a man doesn't amount to much who isn't a little batty over something outside of the way he makes a living.

Look around at the unusual men and women you know and see if all of them haven't sidelines in the way of work. These queries are due to a story of a big man who "clears his mind" every evening by driving a motorcar through the worst traffic in the world. He could just as well take easier routes, hire an expert chauffeur or not drive at all, but the trip makes him forget such little things as money deals and big operations.

Use every day some portions of your body other than those with which you make a living, either mind or muscle. Just because you're grown is no reason why you should not play.—Toledo Blade.

Bluffing.

We all know to what desperate lengths some can be carried by their desire to be important or even to seem important. It is as if they felt that they could not endure making this earthly pilgrimage without attracting notice to themselves. Openly or covertly they will try to give their lives enhancement. They are pitiful when they resort to pretense and deceit. And yet even here there is a certain imaginative appeal, a longing to change drab colors into brighter shades, to do for themselves what the writers of fiction do for characters that entertain and charm and thrill.—Exchange.

He's Some Help.

Belle—Her husband is very good at figures, you know.

Beulah—Really?

"Oh, yes. He's in a bank."

"Think of that!"

"She always takes him to her knitting club."

"What can he do at a knitting club?"

"He counts the stitches so she can talk."

Marching Orders.

Patience—What's become of that young man who used to call on you?

Patrice—You mean the one papa didn't like?

"That's the one."

"Oh, he's gone to be a soldier."

"What's he know about being a soldier, I'd like to know?"

"Oh, papa showed him how to this year. Judge Romjue of the first district has been given a clear road. Ralph Lozier of Carrollton, who made the race against Judge Rucker of the second district the last time, and was expected to be a strong opponent this time, has withdrawn until the end of the war. Lewis B. Reed, who made the race against Judge Alexander of the third district two years ago, has issued a statement that he will not muddy the waters any more until the war is over. Representative Borland of Kansas City will have a clear field as will Rubey, Decker and Russell of South Missouri, according to latest advices. It seems to be the general feeling that those members who have done their duty and stood four square since our entry into the war should be allowed to continue unmolested. Representative Booher is one of the few exceptions. He has been standing by the president and the administration generally without wavering but in some way the impression seems to have gone out that he doesn't like to run alone and he always has company. He says this is entirely erroneous and, especially while he is compelled to remain at his post in Washington, he would be perfectly satisfied to make the trip alone.

Our Boys in France and Home Protection

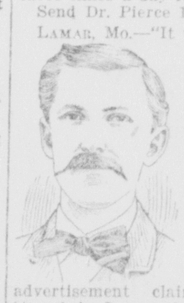
The men on the firing line represent the pick of our American youth. One in four of our boys at home was sick, rejected because of physical deficiency. Many times the kidneys were to blame. If we wish to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says that we should drink plenty of water daily between meals. Then procure at the nearest drug store, Anuric (double strength). The cost is 60c. This "An-u-ric" drives the uric acid out and cures backache and rheumatism.

If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a diet of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month.

Send Dr. Pierce 10c for trial pkg.



LAMAR, Mo.—"It was impossible for me to void the kidney secretion without the use of a catheter, consequently serious complications arose. Water became foul and caused great irritation and much pain. Everything advised did no good. I saw Dr. Pierce's advertisement claiming merit for 'Anuric.' I sent for a package and soon discovered that it brought relief. I have used Anuric ever since. The water is natural now, my health good, appetite splendid. I most assuredly feel that Anuric is a great remedy for bladder troubles."—H. H. FLEISHER, Box 896.

Mrs. Selena Tanner, Athens, Ohio, writes: "I cannot find words to express my thanks for your kind advice. I never once thought I had catarrh of the stomach. I commenced taking Peruna, as you directed. My stomach continued to hurt me for about two weeks after I began the medicine, and then it stopped. I now have a good appetite, while before I was nearly starved."
